keeper, residing at Windsor House, Queen's Head Central, on the 25th inst.

His Worship remained the case on the previous day to allow inquiries to be made to find the officer the defendant said he had been in contact with, upon the day of the alleged offence. A statement was made, but had failed to elicit anything further.

Paul Bohm, recalled, said the prisoner left the court and tried to run away.

Gen. Bramwell, Lieutenant of the Northamptonshire Regiment, said the defendant belonged to his Regiment, and had borne a good character.

The defendant had nothing further to say, and his Worship sentenced him to six months' hard labour.

A NEW BONANZA A THOUSAND FEET DEEP.

No man can measure the depths at which his surfers riches of mother earth. The experiences at Sausalito this week in the Horizons and Duane claim is indeed. The story reads like a chapter of Job's adventures gathering gold from the bottom of the ocean, and for some time at 1,600 fathoms. Money was going out, and little coming in. There was an increasing bank overhead, and whispers were going round of a coming "illing call." Of course the shrews were flat in the market. Suddenly the pie-men came upon a rock formation in a cleft of the mine. It was a vein of silver, and when it ran out, tons of ore were taken out and tested. They gave off 56 oz. of gold to the ton. The company at a single stroke cleared themselves of their bank debt, and stood ready to pay a dividend. This was from a single crushing. The second and crashing took place the next day, with a richer result, over 500 oz. of gold coming from the second batch of stones. It ran out to the value of $100,000. The shares of the mine have, of course, jumped up in value, some 150/400 or $200,000. They are principally owned by Messrs. Muller, Lansell, and Casey. There is in this little story an indication of the untold possibilities of gold-mining. The man who has bottomed his shaft at one level, and who thinks he has got all the gold out of it, is likely to find more and more of it below. The bottom-up stories of the modern prospector. With this little end he can tear the secrets of the earth literally from her very bosom, and rifle her storehouses of treasure. Depth opens on depth. We hear the other day of an application to the Government to put down a bore in one of Mr. N.D.L.'s mines over 2000 ft beneath the surface of the earth. The hole has been drilled at such a position at the wildest chancery. To the researches of science all things are possible. Instead of the world's gold being exhausted, we may be said to have done no more yet than scratch the surface, and take the first fruits. The bulk of the harvest has to be gathered. —Otago Daily Times.
